“My Garden” Information sheet

Residential front or rear garden displays for most of us are for our own enjoyment and at times it would be appreciated if someone said how attractive yours looked; we would therefore like to invite you to enter for our ‘Llandudno in Bloom Competition’ which is free, see attached form.

Judging will be between Monday 08 July and Friday 12 July, please read Important Information notes below.

Class

- 1 Front garden - residential house, bungalow, apartment or flat with an individual or shared garden
- 2 Rear garden - residential house, bungalow, apartment or flat with an individual or shared garden

Only one class no. can be entered for your property.

Access must be unrestricted please see note Important Information note a) below.

The size of your property doesn't matter. It's the way you have used the available space that will count.

Your Display can be either hanging baskets, window boxes, containers of bedding plants, perennial plants or contemporary/traditional garden or combination of all these regardless of size, it's your choice.

Your entry will be judged against the standards shown below and the allocation of Awards allows entrants to see how well their entry was judged.

Marking Criteria	Judged against these standards	Maximum points	Awards	Points	Grade
Impact	Design, colour, & presentation	30	Gold	85-100	Outstanding

Royal Horticultural Society gardening hints and tips for summer displays with helpful online links

Bedding plants

From elaborate public garden displays and street planters to the smallest front garden, bedding plants provide a temporary decorative seasonal display for beds, borders, containers and hanging baskets.

Bedding can be grown from seed, bought as young seedlings (plug plants) or purchased as pot grown specimens often in multi-packs and cellular trays, ready for planting out in late May.

Hanging baskets

Plant summer hanging baskets from April onwards, but they will need protection from frost until the middle or end of May. If you do not have a greenhouse, it is usually easier to plant in situ once the frost have passed.

You would normally plant up a long-lasting perennial hanging basket from April onwards, depending on the types of plants being used.

Check baskets every day in summer, watering always unless the compost is wet. Drying out is an increasing risk as the plants grow and days remain warm.

Deadhead regularly to prevent the plants' energy going into seed production, rather than more flowers.

Hanging baskets can be self-planted and a helpful Royal Horticultural Society website is:

Planters and containers

For successful summer displays, choose plants that flower over a long period of time, respond well to deadheading and are tolerant of container cultivation. A wide range of suitable plants should be available in most garden centres/nurseries from late March onwards. However, don't plant them out until risk of frost has passed in your area.
